The Northeast Collegiate Navigators seeks qualified candidates to join our regional staff team to reach students for Christ on campuses in New York and New England.

Long term openings at:

- University of Maine—Orono
- University of Massachusetts— Amherst
- Dartmouth College
- New York University
- Worcester Polytechnic Institute
- University of Vermont
- Cornell University
- Boston University
- Yale University
- University of Southern Maine

Full-time, part-time, and bi-vocational positions are available commensurate with experience and willingness to raise financial support.

The Navigators (www.navigators.org) is an international, interdenominational missions organization. Navigator staff are dedicated to training and walking with believers who will in turn do the same with others through authentic, purposeful relationships.

The Northeast hosts over 500 colleges and universities campuses. Of the 1.8 million college students, it is estimated that less than 4% are committed followers of Jesus Christ. Countless opportunities abound for evangelism, discipleship and missions. The Northeast Navigators serve on 20 campuses and seek to expand their ministry reach.

Leadership, training and team-based structure provided.

Responsibilities:

Ministry creation, leadership, evangelism, discipleship, teaching, public speaking, team building, teamwork, fundraising, coordinating retreats and conferences, directing spring break trips and summer programs, and church relations.

Qualifications:

An ideal applicant would have at least three years of work experience or graduate studies (post bachelor's degree) and a demonstrated track record of significant achievement and leadership within their professional and/or academic career.

He or she would have a strong Biblical background, a proven commitment to evangelism and discipleship, and the ability to adapt to the culture of a college campus. In terms of work style, the candidate would need to be a self-starter, with the motivation to own tasks and work independently, but also the ability to collaborate effectively with others.

Strong personal motivation to invest in the vision and mission of The Navigators is highly valued. Candidates must be mature and growing Christians with an understanding of campus ministry, a passion for connecting students with the person of Christ, and a grasp of the strategic role of the university in our culture.

Professional profiles of top candidates might include experienced youth or campus ministers; associate pastors, educators, engineers, business or nonprofit leaders or strategy consultants.

Staff Training:

Prior to long-term appointment with a campus ministry, candidates are required to complete at least two years of residential ministry training with a senior staff trainer. Current training locations include Boston University, New York University, University of Southern Maine, UMASS—Amherst, University of Vermont, and Yale University.
